Five products to look out for this month

Bose Portable Home Speaker

£329

In keeping with the company's recent products, the Bose Portable Home Speaker sticks with a does-what-it-says-on-the-tin approach to naming. It's portable, with a 12-hour battery life and a 360-degree sound. Spotify Connect, Bluetooth, AirPlay 2 and both Amazon Alexa and Google Assistant complete the rather impressive spec sheet.

Naim Mu-so Qb 2

£749

With Naim's launch of the second-generation Mu-so in May, it was only a matter of time before the smaller Mu-so speaker got a refresh too. The Qb 2 now has Naim's latest hi-res, multi-room streaming platform; boasts a new, intuitive control panel; and promises improved performance with its newly developed drivers.

Fyne Audio F502SP

£3500

We're familiar with the concept of 'special editions', and here we have Fyne's take on the idea. Its F502SP (Special Production) floorstander essentially combines the drivers and technologies of the F702 with the cabinet of the F502, bridging the gap between those two models in the brand's line-up.

Denon PMA-600NE

£349

Denon has launched two new products in its 600 Series, this integrated amplifier and a CD player (the DCD-600NE). The PMA-600NE uses Denon's Advanced High Current (AHC) power amplification technology and also sports an Analogue Mode that disables the digital inputs and Bluetooth (and thereby the interference they can cause), so the unit can work as a purely analogue amplifier.

Marantz NR1200

£599

A 75W-per-channel stereo network receiver with a feature set that belies its slimline proportions, the NR1200 is designed for playing both music and movies. Five HDMI inputs, plus one HDMI out with ARC, sit alongside a phono stage, AirPlay 2 and Bluetooth, as well as the HEOS hi-res, multi-room platform for streaming from Spotify, Amazon Music, Tidal, TuneIn Radio and local network sources.
